Headline:
Some warm sunshine for many.

Today:
Dry with warm sunny spells for most after early fog patches clear by mid-morning. Scattered showers across southeast England; and patchy rain spreading across some northwest, especially west and north of Scotland. Windy in the far north.

Tonight:
Cloud and patchy light rain sinking southeast into central Britain but still plenty of dry weather with clear spells and some fog patches.

Tuesday:
Variable cloud with warm sunny spells for most. Some early fog patches clearing by mid-morning. Thicker cloud and outbreaks of rain reaching the far northwest accompanied by coastal gales.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Periods of rain, locally heavy, affecting many northern and northwestern areas during this period. Mostly dry and bright in the south. Strong winds across the north, especially Wednesday and Thursday.
